

Hundreds march to protest US aggression

AN AMERICAN FLAG is burned in front of the U.S. consulate on McGregor Street during the demonstration Saturday protesting the war in Indochina. More photos, centrespread.

A bas l'impérialisme Américain! The tone was set for the Viet Nam demonstration against United States aggression in Indochina. Thirty groups formed a march Saturday to the U.S. consulate in solid opposition to U.S. imperialism in Viet Nam and throughout the world. After the demonstration the marchers proceeded to Sir George Williams University where a standing room only audience listened to various speakers for a period of over two hours.

At 1:30 p.m. close to 2000 people gathered at Dominion Square thus comprising the largest demonstration in Montreal within recent years against U.S. involvement in Viet Nam. Many varying political groups had put aside their ideological differences and united to form a common front. The mass rally was planned to take place on the same day as Richard Nixon was being inaugurated for his second term as President of the U.S.

The groups were organized around 3 main demands:

- Nixon should immediately sign the 9 point accord for peace in Viet Nam.

- Quebec and Indochina should unite in solidarity against U.S. imperialism.

- The struggle for socialism should continue until it is achieved.

The march up to the consulate was marked by high enthusiasm and was extremely vocal. Such slogans as "Mort à l'impérialisme Américain" and "Nixon Assassin" were constantly shouted by the marchers.

Riot police armed with two-foot long billy clubs and wearing helmets with protective face masks lined the street in front of the consulate as they blocked off the front of the building for about half a block. There were also police photographers and plainclothes policemen stationed in apartment balconies just above the consulate.

A Viet Nam veteran set fire to an American flag shortly after the arrival of the marchers in front of the consulate. Montreal riot police stood by as the burning took place directly in front of them.

Afterwards at Sir George, the marchers and others listened to a member of the Viet Nam Patriots, a Laotian comrade, a spokesman for the Indochina Solidarity Committee, and Charles Gagnon.

The Laotian and the Viet Nam patriot both expressed their solidarity with all other groups engaged in the struggle against U.S. neo-colonialism and imperialism. They stressed the need for "combatting US imperialism in Quebec as well as in Viet Nam."

The representative of the ISC called for the support of the people of Quebec for the Indochinese people. He said that there is not one country in the world where the people support

Vet says US far from peace

"Some people may wonder why the October 26 Vietnam peace agreement is still unsigned," a leader of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War said last Friday, "but we should wonder about that only if we assume that Nixon really wants peace, and that's an erroneous assumption."

Speaking to a McGill audience of about 100, Al Hubbard pointed out that there is "nothing in American strategy or goals to even suggest that the U.S. wants peace."

In fact, said Hubbard, American strategy after the first mention of peace last October was to black out all news on Vietnam and increase "the infusion of military equipment and personnel" into the area. Further, all American hardware there was "given" to Saigon so that the U.S. need not withdraw any of it even if the peace agreement is signed, because "it now all 'belongs' to the Thieu regime." The U.S. is thus manoeuvring to prevent peace: "American peace talk," Hubbard emphasized, "is simply rhetoric masking imperialist goals."

These goals, Hubbard explained, include using Vietnam as an example to Third World countries. The 12 days of saturation bombing last December, for instance, were meant to warn the Third World not to oppose the U.S. aggression in Indochina. He then demanded that Nixon sign the 9 point accord and immediately establish peace in Vietnam.

He further stated that the level of proletarian internationalism should be raised in order to halt U.S. war policy. He cited examples of Italy, Australia, and Denmark where dockworkers refused to unload cargo off U.S. ships as a means of anti-imperialist protests. He described the mounting dissension among the U.S. forces in Indochina, which, he said, is largely attributed to an indigenous anti-war backlash. "Fragging," (the revolt of the soldiers by assassinating senior officers) has become commonplace in Viet Nam. There are also many examples of U.S. aircrew men sabotaging their own planes.

Charles Gagnon, the final speaker, pointed to the fact that more than half of the B-52's sent to bomb Hanoi and Haiphong had been shot down by the North Vietnamese, showing that the U.S. can be defeated.

Gagnon linked the global anti-imperialist struggles with the battle against capitalism in Quebec.

"The people of Quebec," he said, "are victims of capitalist exploitation by the Canadian bourgeoisie, and if U.S. imperialism were nonexistent the bourgeoisie would not have an ally."

Gagnon cited the demonstration as an example of the anti-imperialist consciousness of the Quebec people. "It is imperative that we in Quebec mobilize all possible forces to fight the twin evils of capitalism and imperialism, while always keeping in mind the ultimate goal of socialism," he concluded.

McGill's complicity

From an interview with Principal Bell published in the McGill Daily of September 19, 1972:

Daily: ... We are questioning the basic anti-people orientation of education in this society. Defence projects, of course, are common examples of this.

Bell: What defence projects?

Daily: Research into counterinsurgency and more refined methods of mass murder.

Bell: At McGill?

Daily: At universities across North America generally. Many of which are heavily subsidized by governments for defence related research.

Bell: The Canadian government?

Daily: Yes, the Canadian government too. Also much of this research done in Canadian universities has been linked directly to the Pentagon. If you want I can produce documentary evidence.

Bell: Oh, you don't have to. There is a list with descriptions of every research project at McGill in deposit at the library.

The destruction of Hanoi's Bach Mai Hospital, last December when two bombs fell directly into its blood transfusion center, was just one instance of the inhumanity of the Washington war-mongers. Twenty-three doctors, nurses, and medical students, and also a number of patients, were killed; 1,550 quarts of plasma were destroyed.

The horrors of the indiscriminate bombing of Hanoi and other cities in North Viet Nam and the outrage at having been deceived by Nixon and Kissinger have once again produced an international wave of anger. All over the world, Nixon's inauguration was greeted with strident protest. The largest demonstration in Canada was held here in Montreal on Saturday, when over 1500 people denounced the U.S. aggression and demanded that Nixon sign the October peace agreement.

While American war policy is being condemned by the people of the world, the U.S. government continues to draw support from the Canadian government and from Canadian corporations and universities. Canada received more than half the grants made by the U.S. Department of Defence to foreign educational and non-profit organizations between 1967 and 1971.

The findings of Project Anti-War reveal that our own McGill University is a partner to the Pentagon crimes. McGill received $831,415 from the Pentagon between 1967 and 1971. A good portion of this sum was allotted to prime military research contracts.

The study was made public last October. To date the Administration has kept silent.

The silence is significant in the light of the fact that in an interview with the Daily published on September 19, 1972, Principal Bell had denied the existence of any such military research at McGill.

Any such attempt to cover up McGill's complicity can only be fraudulent. The facts are undeniable. We condemn this complicity and call upon Principal Bell to end immediately all war-oriented research at this university.

High School Madness?

Sir,
It grieves me to realize that McGill is beginning to resemble the New York public school system. As a place where anyone may walk in off the street, we might expect anything to happen although we have had little trouble up to now.

After walking into the ladies locker room in the Leacock basement at 8 tonight, I was approached by a boy of high school age who proceeded to make sexual advances to me. When I told him to get lost he propositioned me. Fortunately, he left after my refusal was made abundantly clear. All the while, I neither heard nor saw anyone else who might have come to my aid had I needed it. And this is not the first time I have been stopped. Just before the Christmas holidays another boy of about the same age, and obviously mentally retarded, attempted to engage me in a conversation.

Both of these experiences would be unnerving at any time, but when it happens when you're alone in a basement at night it's frightening. I am hardly beautiful and did nothing to cause either of these advances so there must be some dangerous people walking around here. This leads me to suggest that a guard be posted from 6 to closing time in the Leacock basement. If this is not acted on, something serious could happen.

Greek political prisoners

Sir,
At the beginning of 1972, some Greek students from McGill, Sir George, Université de Montréal and Dawson College formed a student committee for the release of political prisoners in Greece. They circulated a petition to a number of Student Societies of Canadian and American universities and colleges asking them moral support for the amnesty and release of all political prisoners held by the junta.

Forty-nine student bodies representing nearly 300,000 students endorsed the petition. This encouraging news has subsequently appeared in a number of newspapers inside and outside Greece, and besides pressuring the dictatorial clique it gave courage and confidence to the prisoners.

A letter smuggled out of the Korydallos prison and signed by 51 political prisoners, men and women, acknowledges the invaluable moral support of the student population in North America. Following is a translation of their letter addressed to North American students.

Student Committee for the Release of Political Prisoners in Greece

Dear Friends,

It is with great joy and satisfaction that we learned of your public statement on the issue of Greek political prisoners and, more generally on our country's political problem. We realise that this initiative is in no way new, since you have repeatedly expressed your faith in peace and justice and your whole-hearted opposition to violence and injustice.

We only want to tell you that we do not forget you and the problems facing your country. And we believe that you are amongst those who have the will and the courage to solve them. At a time when, in most of the world, the dominant logic is that of militarism and violence, you and (we believe) ourselves are amongst those who will continue to raise their voices for human dignity, freedom and democracy.

Today, when our people are living under the iron rule of a militarist regime, we continue to need your help. It is not that we think that this militarist regime will be overthrown by foreign intervention quite the contrary: its fate will be decided above all by the struggle of our people. In this struggle, however, we see that all forms of aid to and cooperation with the militarist regime from abroad have a negative effect. We believe that such actions create a spirit contrary to the ideals for the defense of which humanity has shed so much blood, especially during the second world war. These are the ideals that we must rescue and bring into effect and in this struggle we are fighting together.

With friendly greetings, the undersigned political prisoners from Korydallos Prison (men's and women's sections) signed by 51 prisoners.

Against false parallels

Sir,
I would like to reply to Carol Evans' demand for consistency (January 18).

In each situation, there are different solutions required. Issues cannot be discussed in abstract terms.

For instance, prohibiting a man like Hitler from spouting racist propaganda is not the same as prohibiting a progressive person from speaking.

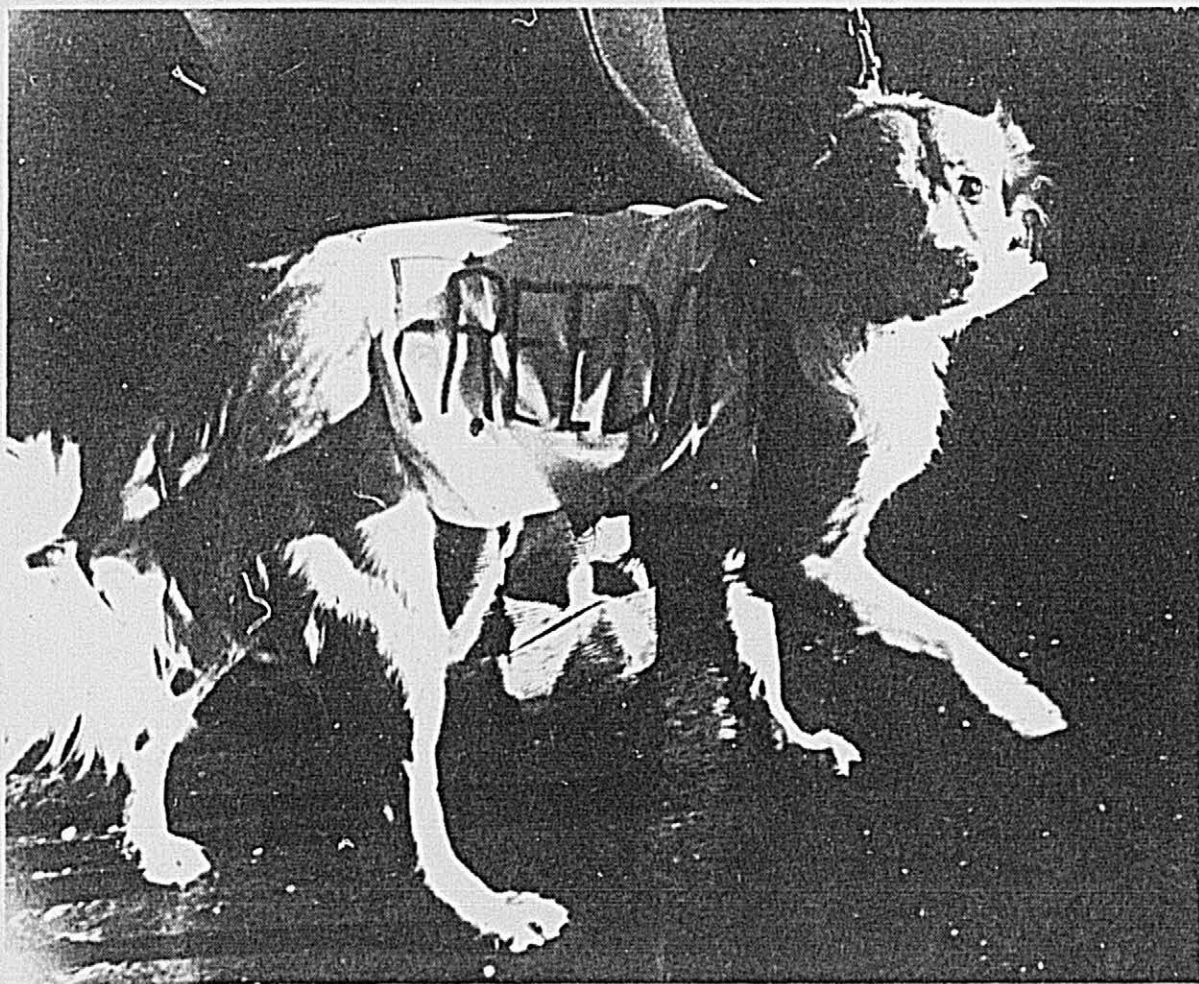

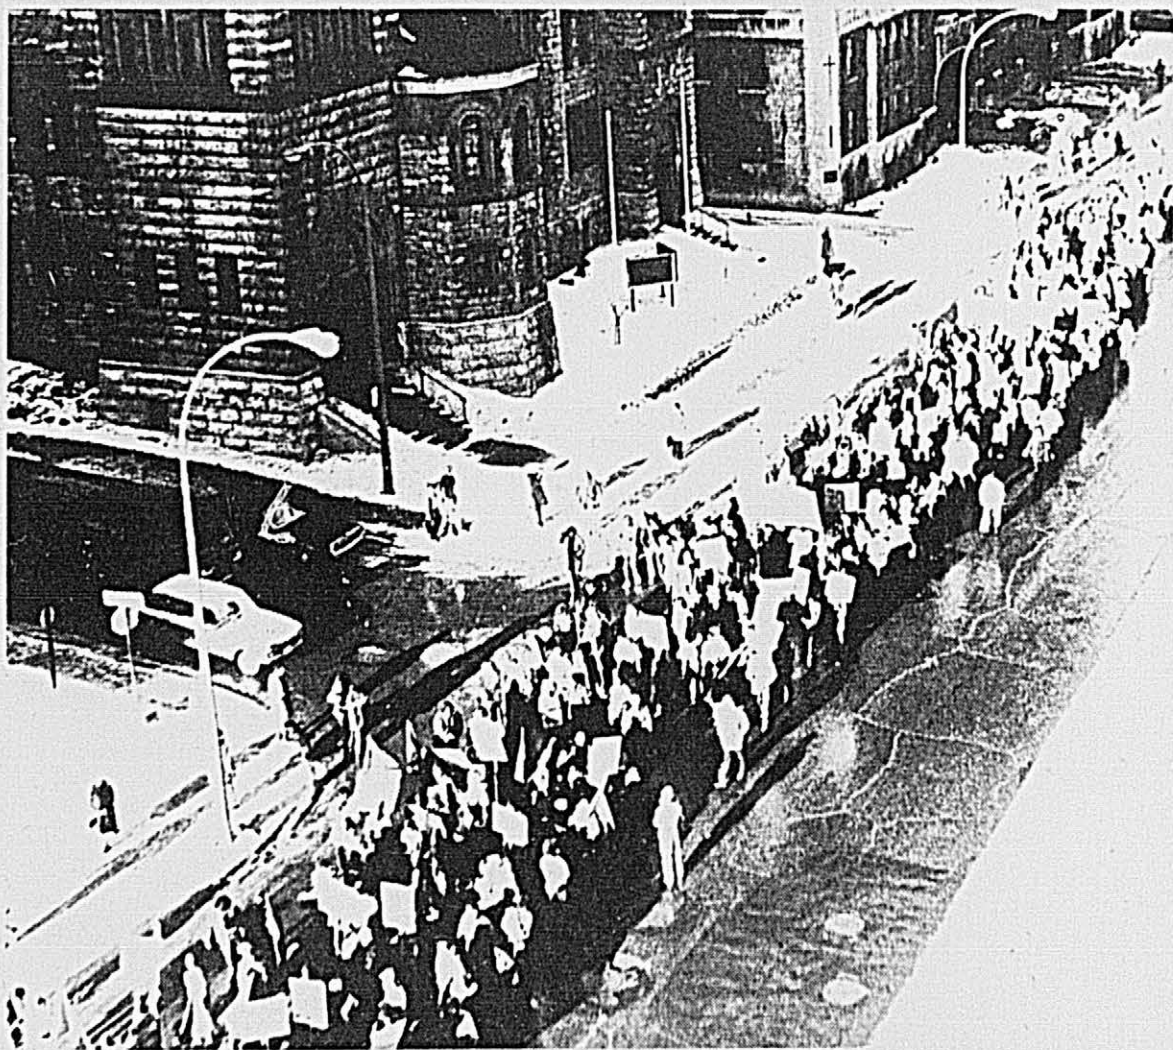

What would be your reaction if our society allowed a man like Hitler to speak publicly and influence people? Would you want this man to be able to promote his ideas and create a situation akin to the one in World War II - convincing people that unemployment, Canadian dependence on the U.S., continuing inflation, and the soaring cost of living are caused by the Jews?

Each situation must be examined separately; each issue must be analyzed independently. To speak in the abstract of prohibiting people from speaking is to draw false parallels.

To discover who should be permitted to speak, we must see who best represents the people. Does the Canadian Department of Immigration best represent the people's interests?

U.S. and not to opt for "any sort of neutrality that isn't 'neutral' in favour of the U.S."

The U.S. wants to "hold complete economic and political control over these areas," Hubbard said, in order to obtain raw materials. In Vietnam, the U.S. is interested in tin, tungsten, and oil. "I personally flew in survey teams for oil companies," said Hubbard. "The trouble is that the U.S. has been soundly defeated in Vietnam, even though it may still cause much devastation and loss of lives." Its defeat means it cannot depend on the Vietnamese raw materials; so it must look elsewhere for these.

Hubbard noted that there is thus a growing American presence in many regions producing raw materials: on the west coast of Africa, in Latin America, and in "many more areas than I care to even think about"; in some of these areas, the U.S. is following "the same blueprint it used in Vietnam in the early 1960's." The American drive for Canadian oil is just another aspect of this, Hubbard said.

U.S. control is aimed at obtaining markets as well as raw materials. Hubbard revealed that he has a copy of a secret study made by the School of International Affairs at Columbia University and sponsored by the CIA. The study calls for the "Honda-ization" of the Vietnamese. "Honda-ization," Hubbard explained, "means transforming Vietnamese society into a consumer society; it means the creation of a consumer market for American goods. One has only to walk through downtown Saigon to see how effective this process

Citing from his own experiences in Vietnam, Hubbard said that U.S. policy has been to condition the Vietnamese into a consumer mentality. The U.S. has also used more general political indoctrination. Further, American forces have deliberately destroyed Vietnamese villages and herded the villagers into "pacification" camps. "And we were specifically instructed to destroy the graveyards," Hubbard said, in order to eliminate a major reason for wanting to leave the camps and return home. Destroying ancestral graveyards also helps destroy culture, which makes it easier to Honda-ize the people and encourage dependence on the U.S.

Another technique for creating dependence on and support of the U.S. is to destroy the rice fields. "After that's done," Hubbard said, "the U.S. brings in 'miracle rice' from Texas and distributes it conditional on support from the recipients. If the people try to rebuild their rice paddies instead of accepting U.S. rice, then a 'communist build-up' will be discovered and the paddies destroyed again."

Political conditioning is not practised only on the Vietnamese, however. "I spoke to PoWs when I was in Hanoi," Hubbard said, "and they told me they had been shocked by the treatment they received from the Vietnamese. They had been trained to expect physical and psychological torture, but instead were treated very humanely."

On the other hand, what the Americans have done to Hanoi is not humane at all. Hubbard described, as one example, the anti-personnel bombs containing 250 steel pellets, which "wipe out everything in their way". In Hanoi,

"an incredible number of people were hit by these" and had the pellets lodge in their bodies. When the U.S. found out that Vietnamese surgeons were removing the pellets after locating them with X-rays, they switched to plastic pellets, which don't show up on X-rays.

The U.S. also carries out deliberate attacks on hospitals and schools. Hubbard noted that Telford Taylor, the chief American prosecutor at the Nuremberg War Trials, was in Hanoi for 12 days last December and spent 55 hours of that time in bomb shelters. "He got there at just the right time," said Hubbard. "He saw Bach Mai Hospital in Hanoi hit three times, and he knows that's a war crime."

In fact, Hubbard added, the U.S. in Vietnam is guilty of almost every conceivable war crime—from its treatment of prisoners to the types of weapons it uses to the kinds of targets it attacks. It has no hesitation in carrying out these crimes, because the population affected is non-white.

"This foreign racist policy," Hubbard said, "is merely an extension of domestic racist policy." As an example of the latter, he described an incident in Cairo, Illinois, in which black protesters were attacked by automatic rocket fire, by two armoured personnel carriers, and by 50-calibre machine guns mounted on the roof of the police station.

Hubbard pointed out that since Nixon does not want peace, the people of the U.S., and of Canada and other countries, must force him to sign the peace agreement. And after that, "our task will be to force implementation of the agreement. I remind you that power resides in the people, and all that is necessary is for them to become aware of it."
